ED. BUTLER CONVICTED

ST. LOUIS BOSS SAYS IT IS AN OUTRAGE

JURY SET HIS SENTENCE AT THREE YEARS IN PRISON HIS SON IS A CONGRESSMAN.

Columbia, Mo., Nov. 14.—Old "Ed." Butler, whose cunning hand has made and unmade statesmen, and whose mischievous brain has concocted boodling schemes which have resulted in the downfall of many, was convicted this morning of the crime of attempting bribery, and his punishment was assessed by the jury at three years in the penitentiary.

The hero of many a political battle, the corruptor of the foundation of government, a most unscrupulous politician, fell by the power of his own hand, and was shorn of his liberty as an atonement for his long career of municipal corruption. The first vote was unanimous for conviction, and the jury then balloted on the sentence. On the first ballot eight votes were in favor of giving him the limit of the law—five years—and on the second ballot it was unanimous for three years.

Butler was game to the last moment. No gladiator ever went into the arena to do battles with his foes more confident of victory. But his defense was weak, and the testimony of the State's witnesses was strong, direct and convincing. Butler's confidence was arrayed against the story of two reputable practicing physicians, who swore on solemn oaths that he approached them with a bribe in his hand—that he had attempted to corrupt them with alluring gold. This story—direct, uncontradicted, unimpeached—went before the jury. All there was against it was the attempted alibi, based upon an alleged attack of lumbago and gout, the latter a disease generally accredited to those who live luxuriously.

After the reading of the verdict all eyes were turned toward Butler. A faint glance came to his face, then his features subsided into the expression of half disgust, which he wore while listening to the testimony and arguments of the State and of his own side. Mrs. Butler sat with her hand on the arm of her son, Congressman James J. Butler. As the jury was being polled James Butler arose and crossed the room to speak to his father, and after the jury had left Ed. Butler Jr. led from the courtroom his brother and sister-in-law and little Edward Butler. James J. Butler, son of Colonel Butler, spoke for his father on the verdict. "It is an outrage," he said, "and I can account for it only on the theory that the jurors were prejudiced from the start, and, I may say, 'fixed.' The instructions of the court seem to have been utterly ignored."

Circuit Attorney Folk said: "The verdict of the jury is a complete vindication of the law of the State of Missouri. The verdict is justified by the law and the evidence, and is no more than what I expected. It cannot be said that this verdict is the result of so-called St. Louis passion and prejudice. It is returned by a thoroughly impartial jury."

The conviction of Butler is a distinct victory for the crusade which Circuit Attorney Folk has so relentlessly waged against the boodling element in the city. It is the sixth case tried and the sixth conviction secured. Butler is popularly supposed to have been the Legislature agent for many of the corrupt deals which were hatched in the municipal assembly, and the millionaire blacksmith is now convicted of attempted bribery in one case and indicted for bribery in another. The second case will not come up for a hearing until his appeal in the present conviction is passed upon by the Supreme Court. In the meantime the alleged boss hoodler will be free on bond.

The continuous chain of victories for the prosecutions seems likely to be a stepping stone to a sweeping municipal reform which will wipe the House of Delegates out of existence and substitute for the present municipal assembly one legislative body to be elected at large. Power to so amend the charter was given at the last election, and St. Louis will be governed upon a more elevated plan by the time the World's Fair opens.

DECEMBER WINDS.

The Pilot Chart of the North Pacific for December says: In Honolulu the average prevalence of the trades during December is 18 days. Westward of the Islands, between 20°-25° N., the regular trades will often be supplanted by the south-westerly winds proper to the southern side of the eastward advancing cyclonic circulations, the centers of which may lie far to the northward. Such a shift of the wind, will, in general, be preceded by a slight fall of the barometer. Toddlers calms, often lasting several days in succession, will be met throughout the belt 0°-10° N. 120° E.-180°; also throughout a triangular area, the base of which rests on the American coast from Cape San Lucas to Panama, the vertex lying in 5° N., 130° W.

The Sultan of Turkey and the Queen of the Netherlands are said to be the only total abstainers among European sovereigns.

WHALEMS USED OIL IN FIERCE STORM

San Francisco, Nov. 11.—Caught in the fierce southeaster which swept along the coast last Sunday, Captain Macgregor of the steam whaling bark Karluk stilled the angry waters by placing oil bags over the side of his vessel. The vessel was off Cape Mendocino when the storm struck her. Under a slow bell she bucked into the heavy seas, but wave after wave boarded her and threatened to overwhelm her. Fearing disaster, Captain Macgregor sought to smooth the troubled waters by pouring oil on the surface. The experiment succeeded, the confused seas settled into long rolling swells and the Karluk plunged ahead without shipping such great masses of water.

The Karluk arrived from the Arctic last night, bringing 5000 pounds of whalebone, 1500 pounds of ivory and 117 fox skins. On August 25 the first whale was struck by the Karluk and gave battle for twelve hours before being killed. One boat was stove in and its occupants thrown into the water. Ten bombs were necessary to kill the leviathan. Two men deserted the Karluk at St. Michael and two attempted desertion at Dutch Harbor.

The whaler Belvedere also made port today with 10,775 pounds of whalebone, 300 barrels of oil and 400 fox skins. The officers of the Belvedere state that though the ice was plentiful in the spring, not a single foe was seen during the summer and autumn months. Even as far north as Banks Land they say the waters are free of ice. The officers give it as their opinion that it would have been possible to sail to Greenland.

The absence of ice in the Arctic this year is a cause of wonder to navigators. The entire whaling fleet is in with the exception of the William Bayless from the Arctic, and the John and Winthrop and Andrew Hicks from the Japan coast.

Removal Sale

Mrs. Cressman of the Wonder Millinery Parlors, now on Beretania street, wishes to announce that she has secured a store now being built on Fort street and will locate there as soon as finished and in order to reduce the very large stock of trimmed hats now on hand, will sell for the next two weeks at a very low figure. All wishing fine millinery at low prices should not miss this opportunity. Remember the place, 248 Beretania street.

FAIR NEW YORK ESTATE.

New York, Nov. 12.—The property in this State left by Charles L. Fair, who was killed with his wife in an automobile accident in France on August 14 last, has been appraised at $492,390 gross and $470,530 net, all personal property. Fair having no real estate in New York. A compromise having been effected with the relatives of Mrs. Fair, this property will go to Mrs. Orlinda and Mrs. Virginia Vanderbilt, two sisters of Mr. Fair. Mrs. Vanderbilt has taken out letters of administration on the estate here.
